Aquatic Directors' Handbook provides information specific to the management of collegiate aquatic facilities and programs. With safety the focus above all other considerations, the goal is to assist professionals in developing a sound philosophy of aquatic management by providing the knowledge base necessary to make informed decisions.

While the text is divided into sections specific to facilities, staff, and programming for ease of reading, these elements are intertwined in the everyday operation of the facility.

This new publication provides you with the latest practical applications for running a first-rate aquatic department. Edited by Paul Fawcett, formerly the director of aquatics at Ball State University, this practical notebook is a hands-on manual that is not only a perfect reference tool for the experienced aquatics director but also an excellent training tool for your aquatic staff.

Created by the members of the NIRSA Aquatic Committee, the authors of the eight chapters have a combined total of 120 years of experience.

The numerous forms in the appendix are camera-ready to be used immediately at your aquatic facility.
