Containing the frank and personal accounts of 15 communards, this book describes utopian communal living around the world in the 1990s. Having lived communally for an average of 30 years, the communards provide accounts of what it is like to be born and reared, to have children, and to face death within such a group. What separates the communities is the detail of everyday life; what unites them is the dream of creating a better life for themselves now and for the future of the planet.
