Ralph Fasanella (American, 1914-1997) painted colorful works packed with observations about working-class urban life. A labor organizer blacklisted during the McCarthy years, he was discovered in the early 70s when a New York magazine article proclaimed, This man pumps gas in the Bronx for a living. He may also be the best primitive painter since Grandma Moses. Although Fasanella dismissed the primitive label, the resulting attention allowed him to pursue his art full time. Fasanella painted worker strikes and exhausted commuters, Coney Island holidays and stickball games in the streetways with a critical but affectionate perspective on life for the average person.
