Bread and Roses (ScreenPress Film Screenplays) Paul Laverty, Ken Loach

In this emotionally-charged screenplay, Paul Laverty's third collaboration with director Ken Loach, the writer explores the most marginalized of LA communities.

"Bread and Roses" is a look at "the other America" as seen through the eyes of Maya, a young Mexican woman who's been smuggled across the border to join her sister Rosa in Los Angeles. Against Rosa's wishes, Maya takes a cleaning job at a prestigious downtown office block, where she begins to confront the realities of life on the edges of American society. The arrival of Sam, a dedicated and uncompromising union organizer who's determined to improve the lot of the workers, sets in motion a series of events that has devastating consequences for them all.
